CHAUTAUQUA CAMPAIGN NOW ON

Move to Make Chautauqua a Permanent Institution. Whirlwind Campaign Began Monday Night. 500 Tickets to be Pledged.

The Directors of the Chautauqua have started a movement to insure the meeting of the Educational Institute for next year. At the session on Monday evening it was decided to make a whirlwind campaign lasting until the closing session Saturday night.

In order to place the movement on a better financial basis and secure the promoters against any direct monetary loss, it was decided to begin a canvass for the sale of 500 tickets, for the next year. The money is not ask for at this time, simply the pledge of the party receiving the tickets that he will make a determined effort to sell the tickets. Within two hours after the announcement was made, the management reported 275 tickets pledged.

It must be remembered that the Chautauqua at Gettysburg is in its infancy. Many stumbling blocks impeded the pathway that led to this successful effort of the town merchants. Those who have been directly associated with the movement since its beginning, can appreciate the hard labor connected with a proposition of this kind. They have been willing workers and deserve the support of every person who is interested in the welfare of the community.

On Monday afternoon Dr. Lamar talked on the subject of "Human Electricity," and pleased a large audience. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Bornschein rendered a musical prelude preceding the lecture. The impersonations and readings, accompanied by Prof. Bornschein on the piano, were very good. Dr. Lamar then opened his treatise of "Dixie Since the War." A vivid picture was painted of the humiliated and bankrupt conditions existing in the South. On the return of Confederate soldiers from war, many who not long since had departed from their homes and families, found nothing but a heap of ashes and charred wood, as evidence of the terrible disaster, that had taken place in their absence. Destitute and homeless, thousands of Confederate soldiers were turned out upon the highways to seek what comfort they could find in a devastated land, which a few years before abounded in luxury. Volumes of history and statistics are inexpressive, of the humiliation and grief that was experienced by these proud and chivalrous people of the South.

This evening the people will have an opportunity of hearing a lecture on Aviation by the "Birdman" Henry M. Neely, Esq., former chairman of the National contest committee.

Following is the program for Tuesday evening and Wednesday:

TUESDAY EVENING

7.30 p. m.—Free Concert, Gettysburg Band.

8.00 p. m.—Prelude.

8.15 p. m.—Lecture: Aeroplanes, How and Why they Fly, Henry M. Neely, Illustrated with Models, Still and Motion Pictures.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 23

2.00 p. m.—Prelude.

3.15 p. m.—Second Entertainment by C. Lawrence Abbott.

4.00 p. m.—Social Hour.

FULTON'S SHERIFF IS ARRESTED

Sheriff Harris of Fulton County in Our Judicial District Arrested for Releasing Prisoner. Milton Plank Interested in Case.

McConnellsville, Aug. 22.—Jeff Harris, Sheriff of Fulton County, is under $2,000 bail for court charged with having liberated from the jail here Russell Sipes, recently arrested by Harry White, a detective from Harrisburg, charged with having burned six barns in the vicinity of this town. Sipes had confessed the crime, say the detectives.

Sipes was arrested last Monday and when taken to jail Harris, it is charged, declined to admit him. The prisoner was finally lodged in the jail against the Sheriff's protest.

Thursday morning word went around that Sipes had escaped. The Sheriff was informed that he must produce the prisoner for a hearing Thursday, or be arrested. No prisoner was produced and Harris did not even appear at the magistrate's office. A warrant was sworn out and Harris has been arrested and held for a hearing.

According to charges here, the sheriff aided Sipes in his escape.

A reward of $100 has been offered for the arrest of Sipes.

Late last Saturday night Detective White was called by telephone by Milton H. Plank, of Harrisburg, formerly of Gettysburg, who has an interest in the Dickinson Hotel here and was asked to come to McConnellsville and aid the authorities in running down the incendiary, as there had been a stable or barn burning every Saturday night for the last five months. Detective White came to McConnellsville Sunday and started to work on the case, and on Monday arrested Sipes, aged 22 years, who was found along the creek fishing. Sipes was taken to the Court House and put through the third degree and finally confessed to having fired five of the buildings, and said he did it to see the excitement and because everybody in town hated him and he wanted to get square.

LAXATIVE SENT FREE TO TRY

It may be taken for granted that there is no family that does not sometimes need a laxative. If you don't know of a good laxative, or the laxative you are using is losing its effect, we want to call your attention to Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which thousands of families are using successfully.

We have scores of letters from mothers, and scores from prominent men saying they are using it personally and giving it to their families. The Traffic Clearing House, Pine Bluff, Ark., and Mr. George B. Turner, a lawyer of Harlan, Ky. The thousands of mothers who use it themselves and give it to their children would take too much space to mention.

The reason they prefer Syrup Pepsin is that it is a mild, gentle laxative.

PUTS THE BLAME ON DR. WILEY

Secretary Wilson Testifies in Pure Food Row.

HE DEFENDS RISE OF MCCABE

Declares Chemist Suppressed Material Facts Before Committee, and Denies That Dr. Wiley Was Deprived of Supreme Power.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, testifying before the house investigating committee, severely criticized Dr. H. W. Wiley, of the bureau of chemistry, for his course in regard to pure food and drug work, and told in a more or less general way of the "family troubles" which led to the recommendation for Dr. Wiley's dismissal.

Secretary Wilson declared that Dr. Wiley, in his testimony before the committee, had withheld material matters in regard to the controversy over sulphur dioxide in fruit. He complained that Dr. Wiley did not come to him to discuss subjects about which he had talked freely to the investigating committee and promised to have a little chat with the chief of the bureau of chemistry when he returned from a week's vacation. In appointing the pure food and drug inspection board Secretary Wilson said he considered Dr. Wiley had been done a kindness rather than insulted as a chemist.

Secretary Wilson shifted all responsibility for the employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby to Dr. Wiley. He said that Dr. Wiley was without question the head of the bureau. Asked about his object in creating a pure food and drug inspection board, the secretary said that he felt more power attached to a board decision than to a one-man decision.

The witness was asked why he appointed a "mixed board," consisting of two chemists, Dr. Wiley and Dr. Dunlap and a lawyer, Solicitor McCabe. "It may be that it was not necessary to have a lawyer on the board because of the prosecutions which must be passed on by the board," said the secretary. "It may be that a farmer like me or you, Mr. Chairman, could take a case into court, but I don't believe we would do very well with it."

"Has it worked out very well?"

Not a Happy Family.

"I think you gentlemen have gone far enough to ascertain that the family has not been as happy as it might have been."

The secretary was asked about his phrase in a letter touching the Indiana litigation over benzoate of soda, in which he referred to Solicitor McCabe and Dr. Dunlap as "our people on the board."

"You are pretty well aware that there was friction on the board," replied the secretary. "It would have been an insult to Dr. Wiley to consult him in regard to benzoate of soda."

"Why?" asked Representative Floyd, of Arkansas.

"Because he depised it and everything in regard to it. He felt that his work was reflected on when we appointed the referee board to consider the benzoate of soda question, but it was not."

Secretary Wilson said he consulted freely with Dr. Wiley regarding appropriations for the bureau of chemistry, but in years like this he was likely to say to all bureaus: "Now go a little slow with your estimates; this is a Democratic house."

He declared that he himself and not Solicitor McCabe was responsible for increasing the powers of the solicitor. He denied that in so doing he was getting back to the objectionable one-man power.

Secretary Wilson, in charging Dr. Wiley with having kept facts from the committee in testifying about the use of sulphur dioxide in fruit, was asked about the action of the government.

"Is that the case where Dr. Wiley said he wrote me a protest against the action of the pure food and drug board and got no answer?" asked Secretary Wilson.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, here is the letter." Secretary Wilson read it. He had told Dr. Wiley he would be glad to talk the matter over with the board of which Dr. Wiley was chairman, when Dr. Wiley called the board together.

"There is another matter in connection with this question that Dr. Wiley knew about when he testified before you, and should have told you," said Secretary Wilson. "He knew that we had entered into an agreement with the French nation to suspend the law until the referee board had passed on the subject, and Dr. Wiley was present at a conference with the French ambassador and acquiesced in the matter. He should have told you that."

Secretary Wilson, referring to Dr. Wiley's testimony that he considered Associate Chemist Dunlap his superior, said:

"Dr. Wiley was speaking through his hat."

Secretary Wilson said the Remsen referee board had its origin from conditions in California. He described the uprising of Californians against the order of the bureau, limiting the use of sulphur in fruits, and told of his promise of further investigation before the order would be enforced.

THE SMUGGLER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Aunt Jane Roe, wife of Uncle Joe Roe, farmer, was a conscientious woman. That was the chief reason why there were no screens at doors or windows to keep the flies out in summer. She thought insects ought to have a chance the same as human beings.

Aunt Jane had fifty hens. She divided their food in fifty equal portions. If one hen got a kernel of corn too little it was made up to her. She would have no mousetraps about the house, and she believed all tin peddlers honest.

This good woman had been conscientious for almost fifty years, when two startling episodes occurred in her life. Uncle Joe sold a horse and out of the money bought her an alpaca dress, the first she had ever had. It wasn't made up, but there were twelve full yards of the shiny goods. Some day when the linings and trimmings could be had she would make it into a best dress.

The second episode was a letter from her sister Nancy, entreating her to pay a visit to the home in Canada. More over, Nancy sent the money for the journey. That clinched the matter with Uncle Joe, who had only the average conscience. He said, "Get ready and go and stay two weeks," but Aunt Jane answered:

"How can I even think of such a thing? You'd let the clock run down the very first night I was gone, and you'd let them two roosters eat up all the corn for twenty hens?"

After talking matters over for a week, however, and after remembering that Sister Nancy was a good dressmaker it was decided that Aunt Jane should pay the visit. It was a straight run to Sister Nancy's. All she had to do was to keep her seat and ask the conductor every fifteen minutes if they were most there. The rails kept their place, and the cars stayed on the rails, and in due time Aunt Jane and Sister Nancy were landed in each other's arms. After three or four days the trimmings were bought and work started on the new dress. Aunt Jane was wearing it when she reached home.

One day two weeks later, as Uncle Joe was hoeing potatoes in the field, he heard the dinner horn blow. It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and that tooting could only mean danger of some kind. He dropped his hoe and liked. Aunt Jane awaited him at the kitchen door. She was palefaced and weeping and wringing her hands.

"Well, what is it?" was asked.

"I've got to go to prison for the rest of my life!" was the sobbing reply.

"Nonsense! What you been doing?"

"And if I don't go to prison the fine will be at least $1,000!"

"For what? Why in tarnation don't you tell me?"

"Gimme a little time, pa. I'm all shook up. The truth of the matter is I'm a smuggler!"

"As how?"

"I took that dress goods over to Canada and didn't say a word about it. There I had my dress made up and wore it home and didn't say nothing. That's smuggling, and smuggling is a awful thing."

"No, 'twan't. It was jest a slip. Tain't like hiding a stone in the bottom of a butter crock. Now, you jest shet up about it and don't sneer me to death blowing horns out o' time."

When Uncle Joe came up to supper he saw that Aunt Jane was still troubled. She had brought the dress downstairs and wrapped it up. He refused to open the subject again, and that night he knew she didn't sleep a wink.

For the first time in twenty years the clock was left unwound. He was ready to go to the field when he asked:

"Are you going to keep this thing up right along?"

"Yes, unless it's fixed," was the tearful reply.

"Then I'd better board in the barn!"

"But it's my conscience, pa—my conscience. I've tried to forget it, but I can't. If I go to sing I hear a voice saying to me:

"'Aunt Jane, you are a smuggler, and you don't look one of your own hens in the face! You've robbed Canada, and you've robbed America, and you deserve to be sent to state prison!'"

"That's the way the voice keeps saying, pa, and what am I to do?"

"Tell it to go to Texas!"

For a week Aunt Jane was the most miserable woman in the state. She was ridiculed and scolded by turns, but when Uncle Joe realized that there was no other way to bring back her peace of mind he said:

"Waal, tie another string around the bundle, and I'll go along with it and have it over with. It'll cost $4.50 to go and come, but if I don't go you'll be flat in bed in a week or more."

And a trip was made to the border, and the bundle was put into the hands of a customs officer with the explanation. He looked at Uncle Joe for a long minute and then returned the bundle with a remark. The remark was saved up until the farmer got home. Aunt Jane saw him while he was yet afar off, and she was at the gate to meet him and ask:

"Is it all fixed?"

"Yes."

"Am I to go to prison?"

"No."

"What did the man say?"

"That you must be an idiot!"

"Anything more?"

"And that I must have come out of the same barrel!"

BEATTIE PLEADS "NOT GUILTY"

Jury of Twelve Men Selected
the First Day of Trial.

MAJORITY ARE FARMERS

Attorneys For Defense Try to Gain
Postponement For a Week, But
Are Quickly Overruled By the Court.

Chesterfield, Courthouse, Va., Aug. 22.—All the sandy woods, roads and cowpats of the Wilderness converged upon the little red brick courthouse at the crossroads here, where Henry Clay Beattie, of South Richmond, answered "not guilty" to the reading of the indictment charging him with the murder of his wife, Louise Owen Beattie, which opened the trial at which his life is at stake.

Before Judge Walter A. Watson declared court adjourned at 5:30 o'clock twelve provisional jurors had been seated in the double row of chairs to the left of the little box which is the judge's bench and the whole venire of thirty-two talesmen had been exhausted.

According to the custom of the Virginia courts, sixteen men who have escaped challenge for cause are placed in the jury box and then the defense has to exercise the right of four peremptory challenges to weed the number out to twelve. The twelve men who were accepted provisionally are—most of them established farmers of Chesterfield—men well thought of in the Wilderness. There was one belated commercial traveler in the lot chosen, one stonemason and a saw-mill hand.

Despite predictions of difficulty in securing a jury to try a case so widely known as that of Henry Clay Beattie, the talesmen offered themselves with unusual willingness. A bad omen for the defense said those who know the simple mind of the Chesterfield men, and the ideals they hold of the sanctity of wifehood and motherhood.

A few minutes before 10 o'clock Detective Wrenn and the others of the Richmond force came up in a machine with young Beattie safely wedged into a back seat. The prisoner's face wore the unconcerned look of a joy rider, a cigarette between his lips. He languidly waved his hand to a few of his friends who hailed him from the lawn. He was as carefully dressed as if bound for an afternoon affair at the Richmond Country Club.

When the automobile which carried him through the Wilderness was bound out through South Richmond, so one of the detectives afterward told the story, an insurance man from the sidewalk hailed Beattie as the automobile was temporarily at a standstill: "How about taking out a $10,000 policy on your life?" he called.

"Better make it $100,000," answered the youth who was on his way to stand trial for his life.

But just for an instant the careless mask of indifference which this accused wife murderer carries without effort was dropped there at the entrance to the courthouse grounds. His father, Henry Clay Beattie, Sr., a grave faced, white haired gentleman, much beloved in South Richmond, met his boy at the automobile steps, threw his arms about the young man and kissed him on the cheek. Young Beattie's lower lip sagged and he coughed suspiciously, then he straightened up and the pretense of an amused smile fluttered about his mouth.

With the father was Douglas Beattie, a younger brother of the prisoner. Tom and Ben Owen, uncles of Beattie's murdered wife, sat with the counsel for the commonwealth within arm's reach of the prisoner and his father and brother.

In came Judge Watson, all dressed in white linen and smiling greetings to the lawyers. The judge would not call the court to order until he had made the rounds of the crowded reporters' tables and satisfied himself that every one was comfortable and provided for. He even explained to the jam between the writing benches and the rear wall that it was an unusual thing to have reporters from so many large cities present, and that he knew the people of Chesterfield were glad to grant them every courtesy.

Then Hill Carter and Henry J. Smith, Jr., defendant's counsel, after the usual motions to quash the indictment had been denied, made a plea for an extension of time in which to prepare their case. They wished the case to be postponed a week, and added as one reason that they had only completed their list of witnesses. The judge denied their application and Beattie was called upon to stand up while the indictment, in all the profoundities of specific verbiage, was read. The clerk looked up to him for an answer.

"Not guilty," said the youth, with an air of bravado and a backward tilt of his shoulders.

The examination of the talesmen then proceeded. Neither side seemed to be quibbling. The judge himself announced that no man should be considered disqualified because of having read newspaper accounts of the case; there wasn't a man in Virginia that hadn't read something, he said, and he added, with an apology to the reporters, that maybe everybody did not believe everything he saw in the press.

WILL BECOME STATES

President Taft Signs Measure Admitting
Arizona and New Mexico.

Washington, Aug. 22.—President Taft signed the joint resolution admitting the territories of New Mexico and Arizona to the union, which was passed by congress after his veto of the first statehood measure.

Under the terms of the joint resolution it is still necessary for the voters of Arizona to eliminate the recall of the judiciary provision from their constitution before statehood can be granted. New Mexico will come into union practically automatically after an election has been held for the selection of state officers and representatives in congress. At this election votes will also be cast upon several amendments to the constitution which are suggested by congress. It is not, however, mandatory that New Mexico accept the amendments.

In the case of Arizona, at the same time that the voters select their state and national representatives they must vote on the recall of the judiciary provision. If they vote against this the president will issue his formal proclamation announcing the admission of the territory to the union, and the officers elected will then become eligible for office. If, however, recall is not stricken from the constitution by this vote the election for the officers is void and Arizona remains a territory.

Yeggmen Blow Safe: Miss $20,000.
Dunkirk, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Yeggmen blew open the safe in the private bank of E. B. Crissey & Co., of South Dayton, a village of fifteen miles east of Dunkirk. There was about $20,000 in the vault, but the cracksmen were scared away before they could secure any of the money. The force of the explosion was heard for a mile away. The two cracksmen stole a horse and buggy from a farmer's barn, and escaped in the darkness before a posse could capture them. The safe and room of the building are a complete wreck.

Bar Profanity on the Canal.
Washington, Aug. 22.—Not even a gang boss is to be allowed to use profanity on the Panama canal. Colonel George W. Goethals, chief engineer, has just issued an order, declaring that the use of profane or abusive language by foremen or others when addressing subordinates will not be tolerated.

Lock Troubles at Liverpool Settled.
Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The local lock troubles were settled at a conference between shipowners and representatives of striking dock men at the Cunard line offices. Carters and coal heavers will return to work with the dock men.

Philadelphia Man Decapitated.
Cape May, N. J., Aug. 22.—John Hirschman, a peddler, of 1910 North Lawrence street, Philadelphia, was instantly killed here when he was run over by a trolley car. The man was decapitated by the wheels of the car. Hirschman is a deaf mute.

A Boston Street.
It was one of the older conductors breaking in a new recruit who had shown that he was not particularly quick to catch an idea. The car came to Webster street, and the older conductor whispered the name to the recruit. The latter did not understand, and the conductor, losing patience, said, "Webster—Webster's dictionary."

The passengers were amazed to hear the new man bawl out, "Webster's dictionary."—Boston Post.

MYSTERY ABOUT LYNCHING ARREST

Stranger Taken Into Custody
at Coatesville.

GAVE HIS NAME AS H. SMITH

A New Theory Opened Up in the Investigation of the Lynching of Zack Walker By the Apprehension of the Stranger.

Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 22.—The arrest here of a man who gave his name as H. Smith is considered one of the most important that has yet been made in connection with the lynching on Aug. 13 of Zack Walker, the colored slayer of Policeman Edgar Rice.

Smith is about thirty years old, well dressed and heavy set, and he refused absolutely to answer any questions when he was before the probers and even tried to resist the officer when he was placed under arrest. He is not known here, but said that he came from Philadelphia.

When pressed for some information as to just what the probers have against Smith, District Attorney Gawthrop would say little more than that the charge against him is murder, but the highly elated condition of that official as he left the investigation chamber bore evidence that he thinks the results have been most gratifying.

"We have got it dead against this man," said Mr. Gawthrop, "but I cannot tell you at this time just what he did."

"About all that I can say," he continued, "is that he was arrested on a description. I do not think it policy at this time to say from whom we got the description. It was from someone here in Coatesville, though. He says his name is H. Smith and that he comes from Philadelphia, but I am not sure he is telling the truth. Other than this he would answer absolutely no questions."

The entire investigation after the capture of Smith seemed to focus in him. It was about evening when it was finally announced by District Attorney Gawthrop that Smith would be placed under arrest. He was led down the steps from the investigation chamber by Chief Umsted, and when he got to the bottom the chief attempted to place the shackles upon him. He immediately began to expostulate with the officer and showed his wonderful nerve.

"I demand a hearing before a squire," he roared. "The district attorney has not right to lock me up without a hearing. He hasn't proved anything against me, and he can't. What do you take me for, a poor kid that can't take his own part?"

The chief snapped the handcuffs on him with little difficulty, and for a minute he seemed to lose his nerve. When it was time to take the car for West Chester he declared he could not walk and would have to be carried. He offered some resistance all the way to the car, and before he could be loaded aboard several hundred people gathered around. Borough Officer Branson and one of the state constables accompanied him to West Chester, where he was committed to jail on a warrant sworn out before Square Paxson.

Smith is a nice-looking fellow. He has light curly hair and his dress, while not especially elaborate, shows much taste. He does not give the appearance of being engaged in laborious work.

Kentucky Lynchers On Trial.

Calhoun, Ky., Aug. 22.—Members of the alleged mob which lynched William Potter, a negro, who had shot and wounded one of the citizens of Livermore before the footlights in the little opera house there are on trial now before Judge T. F. Birkhead.

Clarence Mitchell, who was shot by the negro, is now well and will testify in the cases of his friends who mobbed the negro.

A special session was granted for the trial of the men who are alleged to have been in the mob, and in his instructions to the jury Judge Birkhead denounced the mob of Livermore which had taken a negro from the hands of the officers of the law and shot him to death on the stage of the opera house. Feeling over the case is at a high pitch.

Sothern's Avoid "Fuss."

Dawlish, Devonshire, Eng., Aug. 22.—E. H. Sothern and his wife, who was Julia Marlowe, are spending an idyllic honeymoon at a lonely cottage on a cliff here, overlooking the English channel. Mr. Sothern said: "It is wonderful how you found us out. We are very happy, but I've nothing to say, beyond the fact that we are going to America in October to tour in Shakespearean repertoire as usual. Our marriage engagement lasted one year, and we tried to get married secretly because neither of us likes fussy ceremonies."

PUBLIC SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

On Saturday, September 2, 1911.

The undersigned will sell at public sale the following valuable farms and properties located at McKnightstown Station:

No. 1. A farm located at the McKnightstown Station, adjoining lands of Conrad Walter, W. J. Settle, Wm. O. Andrew and Tannery lot containing 60 acres more or less, 6 acres of timberland, improved with a bank barn, a nine room weatherboarded dwelling house; the Cashtown stream passes through the meadow; good fruit on place. The farm is in the heart of the fruit belt; buildings are in good repair; land is in a high state of cultivation and location could not be better. Several building lots will be cut off the farm at the station and sold separately from the farm.

No. 2. A truck farm opposite the Western Maryland Ry., adjoining lands of Walter Settle, Wm. O. Andrew and the Cashtown road, containing 4 or 5 acres improved with a weatherboarded dwelling and other buildings. It is an excellent truck farm and handy to markets and is occupied by Mr. Yeager and should be seen now to understand its value for trucking purposes.

No. 3. The Tannery lots of Victor Duterra will be sold at the same time, being bounded by railroad and public road and includes the tannery, the coal bins, the scales, post office building occupied by Postmaster Simon P. Stover. The tannery building is 60 x 40 and three stories high. The machinery in building, personal property and bark sheds are reserved and will not be sold. This place could be most advantageously used as a warehouse for shipping. About 60 car loads of apples were shipped from this point last year. This property has a siding from the railroad and this siding could be made 900 feet long. A fine 25 horse power engine and a 40 horse power boiler will be offered with the property. Terms 1/3 cash and balance at 5 per cent secured by judgment. Tannery will be offered in two parts.

These properties are headquarters for a large agricultural business and one of the best situations in the county for the apple trade.

No. 4. An acre of ground near Heinzelman's Station on Western Maryland railroad and adjoining lands of Mr. Biescher on east and running with the Western Maryland railroad. This piece of land is an ideal spot for the construction of a spring lake to supply spring water to Gettysburg by gravity. A lake 150 feet wide and 400 feet in length and about 12 feet deep could be made from banks already there and springs flowing a barrel of water every three seconds at a recent test would empty into the lake. This lake would be 15 feet above the level of Gettysburg. This acre will be sold with water rights upon condition that lake is constructed at an elevation so as not to include or do any damage to the springs feeding it located on other land of the undersigned. Mr. Stackhouse chief engineer of Philadelphia & Reading railroad visited this place in 1905 and located this piece of ground as specially suitable for a spring lake. No More Thirsty Plowmen.

I thought my wife was extravagant when she bought one of those new-fangled bottles for keeping liquids hot, but it has proved very convenient in the house, and now that I have found a new use for it on the farm I am as enthusiastic over it as she is. Before going out into the hot sun to work I fill my double bottle with ice cold filtered water and leave it in the refrigerator so that the whole thing becomes thoroughly chilled. I then carry it out to work with me, put it in the shade or preferably under a bit of sod. The water keeps almost ice cold all day long, even in the hottest weather. This device is about the cutest thing for cold comfort and cool refreshment that I have found yet.—Rural New Yorker.

NAPOLEON'S TAILOR.

One Man Who Dared to Disobey His Imperial Master.

The diary of Pomme de la Siboutie (born 1780, died in 1863), recently translated into English, has something about Napoleon, that remarkable man who continues to be the most interesting figure in European history. Here is one about Napoleon's carelessness in dress and what came of it:

In 1810, when Napoleon went to Compiègne to receive Marie Louise, his sister, the Princess Borghese said to him:

"Your clothes are badly cut and do not fit you. You are so obstinate about not wearing braces—your trousers always look as if they were falling off."

"Well," answered the emperor, "what do you advise me to do about it? Can you recommend another tailor?"

"Have a talk with Constant."

Constant, the emperor's valet, was sent for and named one Leger, who was tailor to Murat, Prince Eugene, Joseph and Jerome Bonaparte. A messenger was sent to summon him, and he arrived at Compiègne the next day. From that moment he made everything Napoleon wore. He consistently ignored his imperial patron's suggestions concerning his clothes. For instance, the emperor wished the skirts of his tunic to be turned back, like those of Frederick the Great. "I should not think of allowing such a thing, sire! You would look absurd, and my reputation would be lost. The eyes of the whole world are upon your majesty, and if you were seen wearing such a uniform as you propose it would be a disadvantage to you, and I should have to bear the blame. I would not make you such a tunic if you offered me the whole of your empire."

ESKIMO SEALERS.

A Battle of Alertness Between the Hunter and His Prey.

The Eskimo method of hunting seals shows a primitive calling improved to a fine art. When a seal is discovered the direction of the wind is at once noted. Then the hunter, keeping himself to the leeward of the seal, walks up to within about a quarter of a mile of it. Beyond this he begins to crouch and advances only when the seal's head is down.

Now, as the seal is one of the most wide awake of animals and has the habit of throwing up its head quickly every few seconds to guard against danger, it follows that the Eskimo has to be extremely alert if he would get his seal. When the seal's head is down upon the ice his eyes are shut, and it is said that in these brief intervals it takes its sleep.

The hunter by carefully watching the seal's movements is able without much difficulty to get within about 200 yards of it, but at closer quarters he is obliged to employ other tactics. He lies down at full length on the ice. Then the real sport begins.

When the seal's head is down the hunter, who keeps a keen eye on his prey, is able to approach still nearer by dragging himself forward on his elbows. This maneuvering continues for some time until the distance between man and beast has been reduced to a few yards.

When near enough to make a sure shot the Eskimo takes his bow and arrow from his side and sends a swift shaft through the head of his outwitted companion. Sometimes instead of the bow and arrow a harpoon is used with equal effect.—Harper's Weekly.

Yearned For Excitement.

"Yes, the great society leader is absolutely ennuied."

"Tired of everything, eh?"

"Positively. The last time I saw her she was faintly wondering in a bewildered way whether she'd better take up aviation or get a divorce."

Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A NIHILIST'S DESPERATE DEED

Story of a Queer Bet and Why It Was Made.

Two men were conversing in a wing of the Winter palace in St. Petersburg, the one the Grand Duke Nicholas, the other Captain Dmitri Warasoff of the Russian army. The grand duke was sitting behind an ebony desk; the captain was standing before him.

"Your treachery is an unpardonable sin," said Nicholas. "I have advanced your interests by attaching you to the czar's staff, thus opening to you a career. You have repaid me by joining this conspiracy against the czar."

"I have not!" exclaimed the captain indignantly.

"I have the proof."

"Let me see it."

The grand duke held before the young man a letter written in the captain's handwriting and signed by him. The accused man started back, a sudden pallor overspreading his face.

"Ah!" said Nicholas icily. "When confronted with evidence your assurance deserts you."

"I never wrote that letter!"

"It is in your handwriting."

"So nearly like it that I could not tell it from mine. Nevertheless it is a forgery."

Nicholas' eyes flashed. "Who would be interested in perpetrating such a villainy?"

"I cannot imagine. Stop! Let me think. Can it be that they are trying to get me out of their way?" He paused in deep thought.

"What do you mean?"

"I suspect certain men, a certain man especially, owing to an accidental discovery I recently made of an attempt not on the life of the czar, but on yours."

"Whom do you suspect?" asked Nicholas, changing color.

"One of them is my friend. If I accused him it might be wrongfully. I would rather go to Siberia than harm him if he is innocent."

"You will go to Siberia if you not give me his name."

"Then I will go to Siberia."

The door opened and a young man named Pertof entered.

"How fortunate!" exclaimed the com. "to find you two together! I have heard that Warasoff is in trouble, and I came to say to your imperial highness that any accusations against him are absurd."

"I am sorry to say, Pertof, that I have indisputable proof. Read that." And he tossed him the letter he had shown the captain. Pertof read it and flung it aside contemptuously.

"The capital is full of plotting," he said. "I believe no accusations, for I am as likely to be accused as any one. Dismiss this matter from your mind, Nicholas. We three are intimate friends. None of us knows how soon he may fall a victim to intrigue. Therefore let us not worry, but enjoy what of life remains to us. Bring out some of that wine I tasted when we were last together and let us make merry."

The grand duke, though not convinced, concluded to fall in with his friend's humor and, tapping a bell, he ordered the wine.

"What's the matter, Dmitri?" cried Pertof. "Isn't his highness' wine good enough for you?"

"I cannot drink under accusation."

"You're squeamish, man. Whoever troubles himself at being suspected or even accused in these days is in danger of nervous collapse. I'll make you a bet of 100 rubles even that within thirty days I will be accused of some conspiracy. I'll make another bet of 100 to 1,000 rubles that within sixty days I go to Siberia and a third bet of 10,000 rubles that I am executed."

"You are trifling with serious matters," said Nicholas uneasily.

"Not at all. We are all in danger, and if I could make the last named bet it would be an insurance on my life for my family."

"I will take that bet," said Warasoff, with a singular look in his eyes.

"Done," said Pertof, taking his hand. The grand duke looked at both men as if he thought they had taken leave of their senses.

Pertof took a cigar case from his pocket and was about to strike a match when, recollecting himself, he handed the case to the grand duke.

Nicholas took a cigar from the case, struck a match and lighted it. He had taken but a few whiffs when Dmitri Warasoff made a leap for him, snatched the cigar from his lips and, raising a window sash, threw it out.

Nicholas looked at him angrily for the apparent insult. In a few seconds an explosion was heard in the court below. All stood mute for awhile. Then Warasoff, pointing at Pertof, said:

"There is the man, your highness, who forced that letter. I overheard him speaking with some suspicious persons upon the subject of an explosive cigar."

Pertof was tried and executed for the attempted murder of the Grand Duke Nicholas. The day after the execution the widow received an anonymous letter containing 10,000 rubles. It was in payment of the wager made between Warasoff and Pertof. The bet was made by Pertof because he had determined to sacrifice his life to the nihilist cause and accepted by Warasoff because he had loved the girl Pertof had married. Five years later he married his old love.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y., Editor of the New York State Grange Review

GRANGE FOR FARMERS.

A Protest Against Admitting to Membership Others Than Those Engaged in "Agricultural Pursuits."

By MORTIMER WHITEHEAD. "For the good of the Order," let the true Patrons of Husbandry, the real farmers for whom it was established and for whom it has done so much, those who love the 'Order for its past achievements and who still have faith in its even greater possibilities for the future, 'rally once again,' and let it be heard in every real farmers' grange hall in the land, 'Back to the farm.' We must get and keep our Order in the hands of the real farmers. Of the farmers, by the farmers, for the farmers.

The constitution of the Patrons of Husbandry, article 6, "Membership," reads: "Any person engaged in agricultural pursuits and having no interest in conflict with our purposes, of the age of fourteen years duly proposed, elected and complying with the rules and regulations of the Order, is entitled to membership and the benefit of the degrees taken." The declaration of purposes of the grange reads: "Ours being peculiarly a farmers' organization, we cannot admit all to our ranks."

"Many are excluded by nature of our organization, not because they are professional men, or artisans, or laborers, but because they have not a sufficient direct interest in tilling the soil or may have some interest in conflict with our purposes."

Yes, the grange was "made upright." And it was not made unlike other class organizations, professional, trade, or labor. The doctors say: "Farmers not admitted into our medical society." The lawyers say, "Farmers cannot become members of our legal society." The merchants say, "Farmers cannot belong to our union."

The barbers cannot join the locomotive engineers' union. The bakers or waiters cannot join the street sweepers' union, the shop girls cannot join the shirtwaist makers' union, and so it goes all along the line. And yet we find there are grangers. A great majority of whose members are professional men or artisans, merchants, manufacturers, professional politicians. Yes, it was "made upright," but it "hath sought many inventions."

The retail merchants will not permit farmers to join their local and national organizations that are fighting the parcel post, and yet one grange in Massachusetts has enough members to vote against the parcel post when it was up for endorsement by the grange. The merchant is in the grange for the merchant, the professor and the politician for "influence" and votes. Factory hands and artisans are in it for the dance and the supper. The grange is a shakedown, an episode, an accident, a "pull." The farmer is in it for the farm and the farmer, with a square deal for both, first, last and all the time. It is reported that one state master ruled that any one who can sign his or her name to a grange application is eligible to membership. Another state master is reported as saying that "the grange has grown big enough and broad enough to admit any one to membership." No wonder a movement was started in Massachusetts to form an organization of "sure enough farmers."—Grange News.

Convention of Farm Women.

A call for the first international convention of farm women ever held has been issued at Colorado Springs, Colo. The meeting is to be held in that city Oct. 17 to 19. The object of the meeting is to take up for discussion better homes, sanitation, higher standards of living, nursing, hygiene, business management of farmhouses and a general improvement of rural life conditions. It is the outgrowth of the recommendations of the Roosevelt farm life commission. The meeting is to be held at the same time as the dry farming congress. The board of organization making the call is composed of Mrs. W. F. Slocum, wife of the president of Colorado college, president; Mrs. Charles A. Lory, wife of the president of the Colorado Agricultural college, first vice president; Mrs. Franklin H. Brooks, second vice president; Mrs. John T. Burns, secretary. Under the call heads of nations, states, provinces, agricultural and educational institutions, horticultural and floral societies, granges, farmers' societies, counties, cities, towns, etc., may name delegates to the convention.

Earthquake Hits Grange.

There is always something doing in a well conducted grange. In the report of the meeting of Santa Clara county grange a San Jose (Cal.) paper remarks: "The afternoon session began with an address by L. K. Marshall, head of the corps of squirrel inspectors now in our county. He told of the best methods of destroying the ground squirrels, which do so much damage to our crops, and answered many questions relative to the work. Mr. Marshall was interrupted for a short time by the earthquake, which frightened some of the timid members and caused some of the horses in the sheds to break loose." But this didn't stop proceedings. The next item in the report says: "During the lecturer's hour the grange was entertained by songs and recitations," all as if nothing had happened. It takes more than an earthquake to stop a real interesting grange program in some granges.

BUSTICATED.

I have jist got home from Coney, down the bay; Been then summer gals and other things so gay; Took a dip down at Atlantic by the sea; Seen them highball fellers "shoot the chutes" in glee.

Then I butted in at Newport, swell and gay; Had a hot old time along New fawk's White way; Buckled the tiger fence down at Long Branch; Got done up and cut for the home ranch.

See that sunburned shirt a-hangin' there? See that busted 'spender on that chair? See my Sunday shoes all worn in holes? See them caloused corns on my sore soles?

Have I got a worn and hungry look? Well, you ought to see my pocketbook! Am I pale and thin? Well, you'd be, too, With them Jersey skeeters eatin' my God!

Not a cent left of that great big wad? Nit, but my life's left. I'm home, thank God!

If to some folks it's a rustication by the sea

It is sure a bustication of poor me.

C. M. BARNITZ.

GIVE BREEDERS A REST.

It's wise to break up breeding pens as soon as the last egg is set for hatching. How ragged the hens get, how the constant egg production thins them down, how the ration, mainly for eggs, surfeits them and how the yards, so often limited, seem like a prison. Yes, give Biddy a rest. The molt is coming, and she needs to recuperate before that ordeal. Clean the lice off the Biddies. Turn them on the green, let them run in the clover, loaf in the shade, give them a chance at the bugs and wigglers and with "first aid" from nature, supplemented by a protein ration, help them to accumulate nitrogen to make their winter coats. And the rooster too. He has crowded loud and long, begotten offspring strong, and he needs a vacation. Give him and his harem a rest. Turn him out on the grass awhile with the sporty cockerels. Let them copy his crow, imitate his swagger, and if any of them starts a scrap over a juicy fat worm he will arbitrate the matter by flicking both kids and gobbling the wiggler himself.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Two pens of White Leghorns were shipped 12,000 miles from Adelaide, South Australia, to Glanceway, Denbighshire, England, and laid the day after arrival.

There are 5,000 poultry keepers in the city limits of Buffalo, with an aggregate of 75,000 fowls. Oh, you city chicken crank, you are getting there, too, and may your tribe increase!

The scaly leg mite starts to work on a chick's legs while with old mother hen if mother hen has the same trouble on her tribbles. Sulphur ointment or plain lard knocks this parasite.

The more hens on the roost the more liable you are to have bad air. The more hens in a house the oftener you must clean up. Experiments show that a small flock tended well is the payer.

You may generally tell whether egg farmers feed greens by the color of the egg yolk. Alfalfa and clover give the yolk that rich yellow that gives Mariah's sponge cake that golden tinge.

In the new Standard of Perfection the Rocks are all described as identical in shape, and yet the half tones of the Barred, White, Buff, Silver Penciled, Partridge and Columbian Rocks all differ in shape. The artist must have had chicken craze or a brainstorm.

Many flocks are sluggish, lazy and unproductive because not compelled to work for a living. Grain is thrown on the ground, they gobble it, then doze till next meal. If you want eggs to rustle make those hens hustle to scratch off that fat bustle.

A newspaper comes out with the heading, "Keep Chickens and Live Better at Less Cost." This advice surely should be followed by those editors who are the victims of dead-beats and must accept for subscription spongy red beads, soft cabbage heads, rotten turnips and squash.

To understand how breeds have changed one needs only to study poultry art of today and yesterday. What a vast difference in shape, size, style, color, beauty, in favor of the present, and yet old breeders thought they had reached the limit. Our turn to be dubbed fossils will come.

When a Pennsylvania baby cut a big bunch of teeth at one lick it was remarked that the kid must have been brought up under one of those systems by which you make $15,000 a year from six hens on a city lot and build bon ton broilers for market while the customer phones his order.

If you have an idea that the big Light Brahma has about dunked visit the "south shore" section in Massachusetts. You will find him there as the famous south shore soft roaster in thousands, sold right at the raiser's door, live weight, at 30 cents a pound for the bonton Boston market.

When it comes to fattening poultry for market take into consideration that shape has much to do with the success of the project as well as the feeding method. Avoid those narrow backed, goose necked, lanky birds; cut out the screeching fliers. Wyandottes, Reds and Rocks finish sleek and sell quickest.

It is remarkable what a demand there is for white shelled eggs, and it seems to be growing. Those White Leghorns and Minorcas do certainly shell out the beautiful white globes to beat the band. New York and San Francisco want them, Philadelphia still sticks to Brownings, brown beans and brown shells.
